The Honorable Barack Obama
President-Elect of the United States
Presidential Transition Headquarters
451 6th Street, NW
Washington, DC 20270

Dear Mr. President-Elect:

We write to express our strong support for the granting of Deferred Enforced Departure for Liberians legally living in the United States under Temporary Protected Status. The Temporary Protected Designation is scheduled to expire on March 30, 2009.

As you know, Liberia entered a long period of violence, turmoil and civil war in 1989 and the United States granted all Liberians the chance to register for Temporary Protected Status. This allowed Liberian men, women and children to seek refuge from the violence and war crimes that were conducted by former President Charles Taylor. While the war is now over, Taylor left Liberia with a destroyed infrastructure and a devastated economy.

The leadership of President Ellen Johnson Sirleaf has put Liberia on a pathway of reform by rooting out corruption in the highest levels of government. However, Liberia's restoration remains a very difficult process. With unemployment reaching 80 percent and an infrastructure that is still badly damaged, Liberia is in no place welcome home its refugees. Furthermore, the Liberian government believes that an influx of refugees could have a destabilizing effect on the country's fledgling economic and societal structures.

One of the unintended consequences of Temporary Protected Status is that the designation never accounted for a protracted conflict. Many Liberians have been living under TPS for at least 15 years and in that time have started families, bought homes and raised American-born children. Liberian-Americans have even answered the call to serve in the United States military.

America plays a crucial role in assisting Liberia's recovery. In addition to the millions of dollars in foreign aid, Liberia also depends on remittances sent from family members in the United States. According to the government of Liberia, remittances from the United States to Liberia totaled $60 million in 2007, providing an essential lifeline of support.

We are deeply concerned that if TPS for Liberians in the United States were terminated, Liberia's recovery could be damaged severely. In addition, thousands of families could its longstanding commitment to the people of Liberia by granting a Deferred Enforced Departure for all Liberians living under TPS in September of 2007. This is why we respectfully request your Administration to consider an extension of Temporary Protected Status or grant Deferred Enforced Departure.

Sincerely,

Patrick O. Kennedy
